

DIANE L. CROSSON

Biographical Information

Diane Crosson is the founder of D Crosson Group, LLC. She provides Interim Executive Services and consultation to nonprofits when an organization has an executive transition. While serving as interim executive director, Diane Crosson provides support and consultation to the nonprofit's board of directors. Guiding the executive transition includes reviewing organizational systems, addressing key issues and challenges, and helping the board define a leadership agenda for the organization.

D Crosson Group, LLC has trained dozens of board members and executive directors on executive transition management at several statewide conferences. She has worked for 29 years in nonprofit, human services organizations with experience as a nonprofit chief executive, a counselor, a trainer, consultant, and volunteer. She has over 16 years experience providing nonprofit management support.

Diane Crosson is a member of the Executive Transition Management Affinity Group of the Alliance for Nonprofit Management. Pursuing her interest in executive transitions, she participated in the Alliance for Nonprofit Management's innovative trainings on executive transition management. In 2008 she attended, by invitation, the 2-day in-depth training for Interim Executive Directors conducted by CompassPoint Nonprofit Services of San Francisco, a respected national leader in the area of executive transition management.

As Technical Assistance Coordinator for more than 11 years at the Texas Council on Family Violence, a statewide organization, Diane Crosson supported executive transitions through education to boards and assistance to new executive directors. She created the Executive Director Development Program which supported and mentored new executive directors. In addition, she provided consultation and training to family violence service providers, board members, and other professional groups.

Diane Crosson was the Executive Director of the Highland Lakes Family Crisis Center in Marble Falls for two and one-half years, and was a counselor at the Center for five years. She served as the Executive Director of the Hill Country Council on Alcohol and Drug Abuse in Kerrville, where she supervised a multi-county prevention and intervention program.

A native of Texas, she holds a M.Ed. in Counseling Psychology and a B.S. in Criminal Justice. Additional professional experience includes work in both adult and juvenile probation.
